Hotel Del Monte and the Mission Tour

More of the nature of a country club than of a hostelry, surrounded by forests and standing in a park of lawns and gardens covering one hundred and twenty-five acres, situated on the Monterey peninsula and close to the beautiful waters of Monterey Bay, is the Hotel Del Monte, the ideal summering and wintering place of America. A delightfully mild and uniform climate for the entire twelve-months makes the Del Monte season a never-ending pleasure. Here every outdoor sport is enjoyed in the fullest measure.

So varied are the enjoyments to be found at Del Monte that it is the object of attraction every year for thousands of visitors from all parts of the world. Its Golf course is conceded to be one of the finest in existence. The course is laid over undulating ground beneath spreading live oaks. In close proximity to the Hotel Del Monte is a commodious Bath House with a very large tile-lined swimming tank, well lighted, ventilated, and filled with warm salt water which is continuously changing.

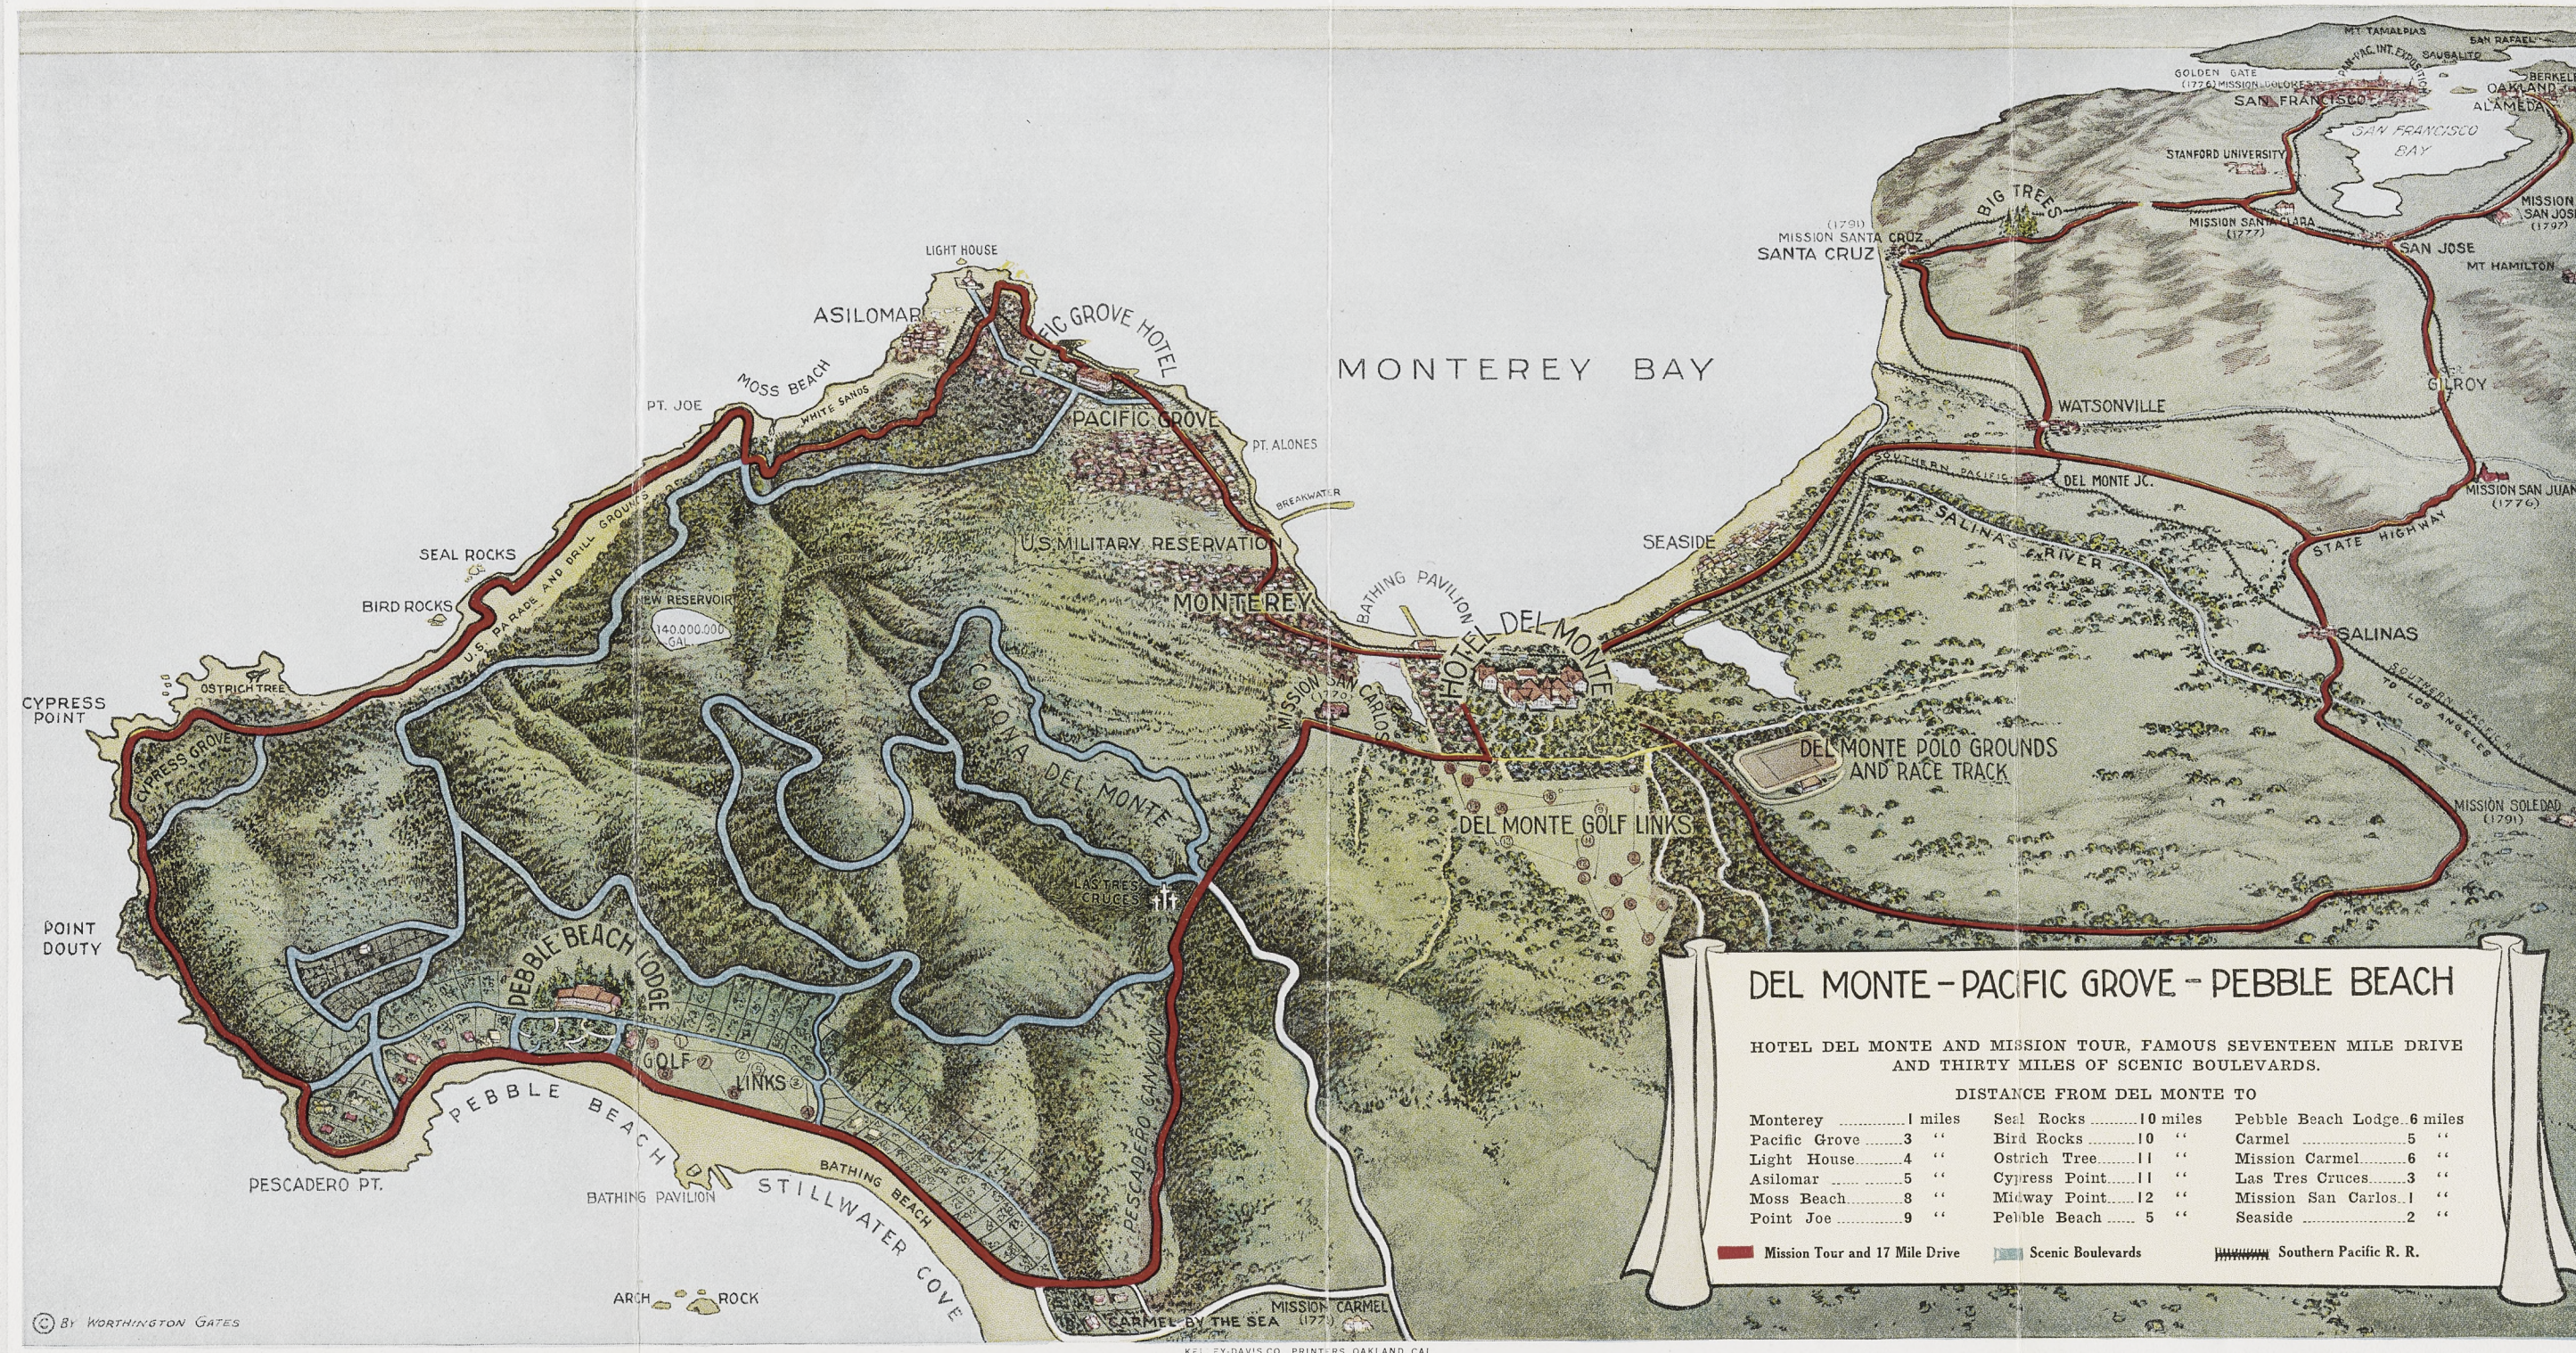

The charming features of Del Monte, linked with the opportunity of visiting the most prominent of the California Missions so closely associated with the early history of the State by the well known Mission Tour, makes this the most popular of the automobile routes.

THE MISSION TOUR starts from San Francisco where stands with doors wide open for its worshippers, the old Mission Dolores (1776); thence follows old El Camino Real, or Kings Highway and passes Leland Stanford Jr. University and then Santa Clara Mission (1777).

Turning oceanward from Santa Clara the State Redwood Park and the Santa Cruz Grove and Big Basin can be visited.

At Santa Cruz was formerly located the Mission Santa Cruz (1791), the site of which is now marked and preserved. A delightful drive along the ocean follows, from Santa Cruz to Watsonville in the heart of the apple country, and thence through fertile valleys to Hotel Del Monte the beautiful, and the golfers' paradise.

On the return trip to San Francisco via Niles and Oakland, the Mission of San Juan (1797) and San Jose (1797), also the Lick Observatory and the University of California at Berkeley can be visited while en route.

Hotel Del Monte and the 17 Mile Drive

No matter how long one may remain at Del Monte, one can never tire of the surroundings immediately connected with the Hotel.

This, together with the exceptional refinement and comfort of the household life, which prevails within the hotel, leads every visitor to regret his departure and hasten his return.

The City of Monterey with its wonderful historical associations connected with the pastoral and early life of California, including the U. S. Military Reservation, with its old Spanish Fort, lies midway between Del Monte and Pacific Grove, where begins the renowned Seventeen Mile Drive. This drive borders the great Del Monte forest of 6,000 acres and skirts the white sand dunes of Moss Beach and the U. S. drill and parade ground used in conjunction with the Military Reservation at Monterey.

Further on, the seal and bird rocks lift their heads above the ocean, with their interesting display of animal life; also Cypress Point, so named because of the cypress trees growing there, which are the same species as the wonderful cedars of Lebanon, and not to be found elsewhere in the world outside of the Holy Land.

Here also is that exceptional and strange freak of nature, the ostrich tree, identical in outline with the bird for which it is named.

Yet further, this wonderful shore drive passes through the beautiful villas of Pebble Beach, with its Lodge, Golf Links and Bathing Pavilion.

Next is the Carmel Mission where Father Junipero Serra lived and worked, and where his remains now rest.

The highest point is midway between the Mission Carmel (1771), and Mission San Carlos (1770), where may be seen the "Three Crosses" marking a favorite resting spot of the old padres when traveling the trail between the two Missions.

Here begins the thirty miles of scenic boulevards, which have been constructed for the immediate pleasure of the guests of the Hotel Del Monte, Pacific Grove Hotel and Pebble Beach Lodge, running through the Del Monte forest and covering the Monterey Peninsula as a whole.

The Drive ends at the Hotel Del Monte, with the Del Monte Golf course close by, a never-to-be-forgotten journey that calls for frequent repetition, but never tires.

PACIFIC GROVE HOTEL

For those desiring rest and quiet on the immediate seaside there is nothing equal to the Pacific Grove Hotel. It is a short distance only from the Hotel Del Monte, under the same management, and guests enjoy all Del Monte privileges. The entire aim of the establishment is to give quiet, comfort and refinement, with a good table and perfect service, at most reasonable rates. The hotel contains one hundred and twenty-five rooms and during the summer there are hundreds of cottages, both furnished and unfurnished, to be had in conjunction with the hotel and its service. It is operated on the American plan only, with special inducements to families and parties making the Pacific Grove Hotel their home for an extended stay.

The street cars to Monterey and Del Monte pass its doors, and the bathing beach and pavilion, the glass-bottomed boat dock and the fishing wharf are within five minutes' walk thereof.

An easy place to reach—a comfortable place to dwell—a delightful place in which to recreate. A place where nervous people find peace and quiet; where healthy people find every facility for outdoor enjoyment; where women and children find a happy and uplifting environment; where everyone joins in jolly good times; where the management is capable, accommodating and obliging; where the rates are low and where the most in comfort and happiness is given for the money paid—that is the Pacific Grove Hotel.

PEBBLE BEACH LODGE

Pebble Beach Lodge is one of the show places of California. Electric omnibus service connects it with the Pacific Grove Hotel. It is built of pine logs and is two hundred feet in length and fifty feet in width. It is under the management of the Hotel Del Monte and guests are given all the privileges accorded to guests of Hotel Del Monte and Pacific Grove Hotel, and further offers to the residents of the Pebble Beach villa tract and their visitors every accommodation for recreation and convenience. It overlooks Carmel Bay, a replica of the Bay of Naples, and with its background of forest scenery cannot be surpassed.

The Lodge is a delightful rendezvous for automobile and riding parties who may gather here for exploration of the Del Monte Forest, and Carmel Valley beyond, where in season can be found the best of fishing and shooting.

The Pebble Beach tract immediately adjoins the ocean shore, facing the south and rises gently from the beach to about three hundred feet elevation. The tract is divided into villa sites laid out with especial regard for scenic outlooks, each site commanding a superb view of mountain, forest and ocean.
